Ordered, That the Clerk return said resolutions to the Assembly, with a message informing that the Senate have concurred in the passage of the same, without amendment.

A message from His Excellency the Governor was received and read, in the words following:

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
ALBANY, April 14, 1869. }

To the Senate: I return, without my signature, Senate bill No. 138, entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a railroad in 125th street, and in certain other streets and avenues in the city of New York."

This bill grants to ninety-six persons named in it, residents of various parts of the State, the privilege and franchise of constructing, operating and maintaining the railroad mentioned in its title, without any limitation as to time, and without any consideration for the grant, except that the grantees shall pay into the city treasury the same license fees as are now paid by other city railroad companies in the city of New York.

Only a portion of the city railway companies pay or are required to pay a license fee. Some have been declared by the Court of Appeals exempt from any such liability under the provisions of their charters. Some pay fifty dollars a year for each car, and others less. The requirement, therefore, of this bill to pay the same fees as are paid by other companies may not impose any condition, or mean anything as an obligation. But however this may be, the license fee is only a nominal charge, or nearly so, upon each car, as a matter of police regulation, and it cannot be regarded as a compensation in any sense for the value of the privileges granted. The bill, therefore, as it comes before me, is a legislative grant to certain preferred individuals of a special license privilege and property, to be enjoyed and used by them in the public streets of the city of New York, without any compensation to the people of the State or city for its value. I cannot concur in or give my sanction to any such act of legislation.

The argument has been presented to me that the streets in and through which it is proposed to lay and operate this railroad, are not very important—that the travel thereon, other than that upon the railroad, will not be great, and therefore that an exception should or might be made to the rule which I have always advocated as reasonable and just, that compensation for the privileges granted should be required. I have also been referred to the example of my immediate predecessor, Governor Fenton, who, while he refused to approve certain railroad grants, signed one last year (similar in character to that now proposed), known as the "Avenue C Railroad Bill," which provided for the payment of the nominal sum of one thousand dollars per annum by the company into the treasury of the city of New York.

I have also been referred to the example of Governor Morgan, who, in the year 1861, approved of what is known as the "Ninth Avenue Railroad Bill," while vetoing other bills of a like character.

I cannot, however, allow this argument or these precedents to control my action in regard to the bill now under consideration.

One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street is the chief thoroughfare of the large and growing district, known as Harlem, in the northern portion of New York Island. If this railroad is required for the convenience of the people of that section, the privileges granted by the bill will constitute property of great and annually increasing value. If it is not required, the grant should not be made. The questions which relate to the merits of all city railroad grants, and the terms and conditions upon which they should be made, are as distinctly raised by this bill, therefore, as if its provisions applied to the more densely populated sections of the city, and embraced a larger number of more important and greatly traveled streets and avenues.

I shall, therefore, as briefly as possible present my views upon the whole subject.

The precedents cited, established by my predecessors, can have no weight with me, because the principles which I hold as controlling, in regard to all these railroad grants, are not in their nature changeable, to be applied, relaxed, or compromised on personal or any other grounds. They are necessarily fixed and immutable.

I hold that these grants belong to the people; that their value should be paid to the treasury of the State or of the city of New York; and that the Legislature has not the right in morals or justice to give them away to any individuals who may be selected for such benefaction.

If the grant made by this bill, or by any one like it, is worth ten thousand dollars per annum, the effect of the bill is to give that sum annually to the grantees, for all future time, without consideration. It seems to me that the simple statement of the proposition is sufficient to show the unjustifiable character of the act.

All legislation should be founded on public reasons and be for public benefit. Legislation is a "public trust," and not a mere right to be exercised for private benefit or emolument. It should be as impartially administered and executed as any judicial or other power of government.

Our Constitution and our form of government recognize no distinction between classes of the community, and give no right to the representatives of the people to distinguish any individuals, by grants or gifts of public property which are withheld from others. Legislation is in the name of the people—by the people and should be for the people.

Where is the authority from the people for the enactment of a law making to individuals the gift here proposed to be made?

In my judgment, equity demands that the value of these railroad grants should be paid into the treasury of the city of New York rather than into that of the State, and should be applied either to the reduction of the debt of that city or of the annual taxes levied on its citizens. These railroads are to be operated wholly within the city, and by a special use of its streets. These streets have either been dedicated to public use by the owners of adjacent lands or paid for by assessment on such property. They are paved and repaved, lighted and cleaned at the expense of the tax-payers, who also pay for maintaining police and sanitary regulations, and the general expenses of the municipal government. If any revenue can be derived from the use of such streets, it seems to me to be equitable and just that it should be applied to the payment of these expenses.

Ten or more railroads have already been established in the city of New York by virtue of special grants made by the Legislature. None of these railroads have been required to make any payment for the value of the privileges granted, except a mere nominal license fee, or (as in the case to which I have above referred), a nominal annual payment. All of these grants were valuable when made, and some of them were and are of great and increasing pecuniary value. The capital stock of the roads and their profits have been greatly disproportioned to their actual outlay and expenditures. Two of them (and only two), viz: the Sixth Avenue and Eighth Avenue railroads, are required to make monthly returns of their receipts. The receipts of these two companies, during the last year, were as follows:

Sixth avenue	$618,570 51
Eighth avenue	783,288 79

From this statement of receipts (which in each case are about double what they were ten years ago), some idea may be formed of the great and increasing value of railroad grants in the city. If all the companies had been required to pay to the city an adequate sum for the value of the privileges granted to them, the debt of the city would have been largely decreased; or if they had been required to pay a yearly compensation in proportion to the yearly increasing value of their grants, the annual taxes levied would have been materially reduced each year, and the people would have been so far relieved from the heavy burdens of taxation.

In my judgment, the Legislature had no more right, in morals, to give away these privileges, and deprive the tax-payers of that city of their just rights in respect to them, than they had to impose a direct tax, of the same pecuniary extent, for the benefit of the persons named in the bill.

I am not opposed to the construction of railroads in the streets of the city of New York. I am aware that additional facilities for travel are required. The improvements being made in the upper portion of the city, occupied for residences, at points remote from the business sections, and the distance to be traveled from the ferries and railway depots to the commercial center create a great and growing demand and necessity for more city railroads. I will gladly give my sanction to any just plan calculated to meet this requirement. But however urgent and pressing may be the inconvenience from the present deficiency in the means of public travel, I cannot consent to give my approval to any measure which, while it may add to the public convenience, violates important public rights or principles, or the true policy of government.

I respectfully submit to the Senate that the just mode of providing additional railroad facilities for the city of New York, would be to authorize the construction of such roads on suitable routes, with careful regulations for the protection of public and private interests. The grant or grants for such roads to be disposed of by the proper authorities of such city, at public auction, to the parties who will agree, with sufficient security to pay to the city the largest sum, in gross, or the largest sum annually, for the privileges granted; or if not at public auction, then in such other way as may be best calculated to make certain a fair and honest disposition of the grants, upon terms which will secure to the city treasury their just and reasonable value.

An act containing such provisions, or framed upon such principles, at the same time providing safeguards for the general public convenience, and for the protection of private rights, would be free from any imputation of favoritism and improvidence, and would secure to the tax-payers a just return for the use of the public property granted.

I respectfully ask, therefore, a reconsideration of the bill herewith returned.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

Mr. Genet moved to lay the message upon the table.

Ordered, That the Clerk deliver said bill to the Assembly, and request their concurrence therein.

A message from His Excellency the Governor was received and read, in the words following :

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
ALBANY, April 16, 1869.

To the Senate: I return, without my signature, Senate bill No. 121, entitled "An act to aid in the completion of the Whitehall and Plattsburgh railroad, and to amend chapter 103 of the Laws of 1867, and to renew the appropriation made thereby."

In my annual message, in referring to the condition of the State, the burdens resting upon the people, and what they would expect and demand of their representatives, I thought it proper to say as follows :

"While in all public affairs a reasonable liberality is to be encouraged, extravagance and waste will be condemned. A large amount of invested capital has been declared by Congress exempt from the taxation which now oppresses nearly every interest in the country. Those who bear no portion of the public burdens will never be active in opposing their increase. Some will be always ready to favor projects involving great outlays of public moneys in enterprises of real or supposed merit, but the great body of the people will not sanction any expenditures or appropriations, the necessity of which is not clearly apparent."

In considering any bill which appropriates money from the State Treasury to aid private capital in constructing new railroads, my duty to the people at large requires that I should not overlook the facts that we are in the midst of a period of great speculation; that we are under the influence, to some extent, of depreciated and inflated currency, one of the invariable effects of which is to create an activity more or less feverish, under the stimulus of which men are not likely to discriminate carefully between legitimate enterprises and speculative projects. When this is over, and we return to a sound currency and a more healthy condition, we will estimate more justly the heavy burdens of taxation resting upon us, and will witness a diminution of the profits which some undertakings now earn, and of the promise of profits in others.

I fully comprehend what great benefits may be realized from wisely projected and economically constructed railroads, as well by the State at large as by the localities through which they pass. I would be glad to see their construction pushed forward with energy whenever there is need of them. I should rejoice in seeing the people of the State assist all such enterprises whenever it was apparent that the general interests of the State would be promoted by their success or injuriously affected by their failure. There are, I know, some portions of our territory full of undeveloped riches and yet so sparsely settled that individual energy and home capital are wholly inadequate of themselves to open avenues of transit and communication to and through them, or even to contribute so much towards local improvements as to inspire capitalists elsewhere with that confidence which would lead them to come to their aid. To open such regions to active traffic, to bring them into nearer connection with our great markets, to give to them facilities for communication and transportation which other more favored portions of the State enjoy, may often be so important to the whole State and be so well calculated to add largely to its material and general prosperity as to justify at times and under proper restrictions, the granting of some aid from the Treasury of the State. While, however, it may be wise sometimes to grant this aid to enterprises simply because of their great merit and their great need, the money of the people should never be used to foster and encourage a spirit of speculation, or enterprises which may possibly have their origin in it. Even in cases of great merit, there is one difficulty which suggests hesitation, and that is that a contribution from the State Treasury, in one instance, becomes a precedent for many others. Meritorious projects and those purely speculative become linked together and alike appeal to this precedent, with equal confidence, and too often, in the present condition of financial affairs and legislative temper, with equal chances of success. Every new railroad corporation thinks it has a right to some portion of the public money, and sends its friends to the Legislature, intent on securing means from the public Treasury, which receives its supply from the contributions of the heavy-burdened taxpayers of the State.

As a general rule, the sagacity of private capital will be quick to see where railroads are needed, where they can be made to pay, and where they will add to the public wealth. It is hardly possible for the Legislature or an Executive to decide these points so well as can be done by the keen sagacity, the willing enterprise, and the careful scrutiny of private capitalists.

General laws have been passed for the incorporation of railroad companies. Liberal facilities are already extended (whether always wisely or not I need not here discuss) to the people in cities, villages and towns, by the issue of their corporate bonds, to associate their corporate responsibility with individual capital, to construct their railroads. Under these circumstances, it seems to me that almost any meritorious enterprise can succeed without State aid, and that such aid should only be granted, if at all, when the necessity is clearly apparent, and when the well-being of the State at large demands it.

The aggregate appropriations proposed to be made from the State Treasury to railroad corporations, by bills introduced at the present session, is over four and a quarter million of dollars, as will appear by the following statement:

Whitehall and Plattsburgh,.....	Senate bill 121.....	$365,000

Wallkill Valley,.....	" "	744.....	128,000
Rondout and Oswego,	" "	747.....	150,000

$4,315,000

Most of these bills have progressed so far as to indicate clearly that the friends of one rely, for success, upon the aid and co-operation of the friends of the others.

The whole amount of taxes levied by the State for schools, canals, bounty debts, railroads and general purposes in 1868, was $10,343,317.01, being five and four-fifth mills upon the assessed valuation of property. The amount of State aid proposed by the bills above referred to, viz: $4,315,000, is more than two-fifths of the whole State tax of 1868. If a tax were imposed in any single year to provide for this aggregate of State aid, it would make the State tax eight and one-fifth mills, instead of five and four-fifths as in 1868. This bill provides for extending the tax over two succeeding years, which same provision will no doubt be adopted in the other bills. In such case the tax would be increased to seven mills for two successive years.

These figures may well excite alarm. If this bill be successful, it will be likely to be regarded as a precedent and to lead to the success of most, if not all, of the others, and thus to subject the Treasury to an expenditure of nearly $4,000,000 more, distributed among enterprises of similar character, whatever may be their respective degrees of merit.

It is a fact as apparent as it is deplorable, that whenever heavy demands are made upon the public Treasury for other than the ordinary expenditures of the State Government, influences are at work in and around the Capitol, to secure their success, which are not calculated to promote an impartial exercise of the legislative power; and it may be predicted with almost absolute certainty, if these present applications are successful, that at some future day, and that not far distant, a portion of the very money now drawn from the Treasury of the State will be used as means to secure renewed and increased appropriations for like purposes.

It is confidently alleged that the people of the State will and do approve of these enormous appropriations, and are willing to have imposed upon them these new burdens for the sake of aiding enterprises, the direct profits of which will inure to the benefit of private capitalists. I do not believe it. But even if it were so, I am confident that hereafter, when the feverish period of speculation shall have passed away, and a sounder public sentiment shall prevail, they would, if I sanctioned the legislation to which I now object, hold me accountable and responsible for failing to protect them against great expenditures, in regard to which the probability of waste and extravagance is much greater than the possibility of prudence and discrimination.

It must be remembered that under the Constitution, it is in the power of the Legislature to submit to the people of the State the question whether they are willing to aid these enterprises by the creation of a State debt. Such a mode of coming to their relief would admit of a larger grant of money and a more systematic and equitable application of it to the different sections of the State. The taxation required to meet the outlay could be extended over a period of eighteen years, instead of being forced upon one or two. The fact that no such measure has been brought forward during the time the State aid policy has been pressed, is strong evidence that the advocates of that policy believe that the people at large would not approve of it. If this be so, the people would certainly resent a proposition to collect at once, and without asking their approval, the large sum now proposed to be levied upon them.

For the reasons, therefore, that it is not easy to discriminate so clearly between this measure and those of a similar character now pending and perhaps awaiting the decision of this one, as to make this an exception; that it presents a question of general policy in granting money from the State Treasury to aid in the construction of local railroads, when the burdens of taxation are too great to admit of the heavy addition which the adoption of the policy would entail; that the Constitution provides a wise and just method by which the people of the State can take upon themselves the decision of the question, under which the tax can be graduated according to the magnitude of the improvement to which aid is given; that the measure may be deferred without prejudice to its future consideration at a period when the affairs of the State and country will be in a more permanent condition, when taxation will only be required for current necessities, and when it is hoped a settled prosperity shall be established; I am constrained, without expressing any opinion upon the merits of the Whitehall and Plattsburgh railroad, except to admit most freely that the region through which the road will run has very strong claims upon the consideration and sympathy of the whole State, and that the construction of a railroad through it would contribute very greatly to the general wealth and prosperity, to return the bill without my signature.

Said bill having been announced for a third reading.

Mr. Folger moved to lay the same upon the table.

The President put the question whether the Senate would agree to said motion to lay on the table, and it was decided in the affirmative.

The Assembly returned the bill entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to amend the charter of the Rochester Waterworks Company, and to authorize such company to borrow money and to secure the payment thereof by bonds and mortgage,' passed April 17, 1863," with a message that they had passed the same with the following amendments:

Strike out all after the title and insert the following:

"Whereas, by the authority conferred on the directors of the Rochester Waterworks Company, by section 2 of chapter 140, Laws of 1863, the Rochester Waterworks Company did, on the 8th day of April, 1867, borrow, on the credit of said company, the sum of $400,000, and did also execute, in the name of said company, bonds therefor, and to secure the same did also execute a mortgage upon the property of said company, and which said bonds have all been negotiated and are now a lien on said property. And, whereas, the moneys so raised have been insufficient to complete said works, and in consequence thereof no revenue is derived therefrom to the great detriment of said bondholders. Now, therefore,

"The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

"SECTION 1. The amount which the directors of the Rochester Waterworks Company are authorized to borrow, by section two of the act entitled "An act to amend the charter of the Rochester Waterworks Company, and to authorize said company to borrow money and to secure the payment thereof by bond and mortgage," passed April 17th, 1863, is hereby increased to $800,000. Said sum may be borrowed for a term not less than fifteen years, at a rate of interest not exceeding seven per cent, and payable at such times and places as the said company appoint, and to cause to be executed in the name of said company bonds therefor, with interest warrants attached under the seal of said corporation, and with the signatures of the president and secretary of said company or such other officer of the corporation as the directors may designate. Such bonds may be in such form and for such sums as the directors may deem expedient, and may be secured by mortgage, executed as provided for in said act, hereby amended.

"§ 2. The directors of said company may dispose of said bonds as follows: Four hundred thousand dollars thereof shall be issued to redeem the present outstanding bonds of the company for a like amount, if the holders thereof shall consent thereto. Such bonds so redeemed shall be immediately canceled and destroyed, so that at no time shall the amount of said mortgage debt exceed the sum $800,000, exclusive of the interest thereon, and any mortgage executed by virtue hereof shall be a lien only for such bonds as may be issued in conformity with this act. The balance of said bonds may be disposed of as provided for in section four of the said act of April 17, 1863."

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
ALBANY, April 20, 1869.

To the Senate: I return without my signature Senate bill No. 205, entitled "An act to authorize the Avenue C Railroad Company of the city of New York to extend their railroad tracks through certain streets and avenues in said city."

The company was chartered by act of the Legislature on the 6th of May, 1868. Up to this time it has built no portion of its railroad. The bill now before me, amending the charter, give the company the privilege of laying its tracks in streets and avenues not covered by the original grant; and it does not provide for compensation to be paid therefor into the treasury of the city or that of the State.

It comes within the objections stated by me in a message sent to the Senate on the 14th inst., in relation to the bill authorizing the construction of a railroad in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and other streets of the city of New York. I therefore return the bill and respectfully ask its reconsideration.

A message from His Excellency the Governor was received and read, in the words following:

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
ALBANY, April 26, 1869. }

To the Senate: I return, without my signature, Senate bill No. 70, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to supply vacancies in the offices of justices of the peace in the several towns of this State,' passed April 18, 1859."

The bill consists of two sections.

The first section provides that whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of justice of the peace in any town of this State after the annual town meeting in any year, and before the next annual town meeting in such town, certain town officers, or a majority of them, may appoint a person to fill the vacancy, "and the person so appointed shall hold said office until five days after the then next annual town meeting in said town."

By reference to article 6, section 17 of the Constitution, it will be seen that justices of the peace are elective officers.

The 5th section of article 10 of the Constitution reads thus: "The Legislature shall provide for filling vacancies in office, and, in case of elective officers, no person appointed to fill a vacancy shall hold his office by virtue of such appointment longer than the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy."

It is obvious that in case of a vacancy occurring after an annual town meeting and before the annual election of the same year, this section would provide that the person appointed to fill the vacancy should continue to hold office after the next succeeding first of January, which would be "the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy." Such provision of law is forbidden by the Constitution.

The second section of the bill provides that when a vacancy shall exist and a justice of the peace shall have been elected in the town, whose term of office does not commence until the first of January following, "the person so elected shall be appointed to fill such vacancy."

Article 10, section 2 of the Constitution prescribes that "all city, town and village officers, "whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof as the Legislature shall designate for that purpose."

It is plain that the person pointed out by this act as the one who shall fill the vacancy in the case described in this second section would hold office, while filling the vacancy, neither by election of the electors of the town, or of any portion of them, nor by appointment of the local authorities. The power of appointment, that is, the selection of the person who shall fill the vacancy, is, according to the Constitution, to be conferred absolutely, if conferred at all, upon the local authorities. The Legislature cannot designate in advance what person they shall appoint.

Both sections of the bill are in conflict with the Constitution.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

Mr. Folger moved to refer the message to the committee on the judiciary, and to lay the bill on the table.

The President put the question whether the Senate would agree to said motion, and it was decided in the affirmative.

A message from His Excellency the Governor was received and read, in the words following:

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
ALBANY, May 5, 1869. }

To the Senate: I return, without my approval, Senate bill No. 207, entitled "An act to incorporate the Oswego Pier and Dock Company."

The bill incorporates twelve persons, named therein, and such others as may join them, as the Oswego Dock and Pier Company; the twelve incorporators named in the bill to be directors of the company until Jan'y, 1871.

It gives to this corporation power to "take any and all lands upon the shore, within fifty feet of high water mark, not now improved or occupied, and all under water adjoining the said shore that may be included within the breakwater built in the Lake, or along the shore," at an approved value, in the same way that the land might be taken for railroad purposes. This land so taken may be improved by "filling in, making slips, wharves, piers, warehouses, railroad tracks or such other improvements for commercial or manufacturing purposes as may be desired by the said company.

The territory within which the company is to operate is defined as "lands on the shore and under the waters of Lake Ontario, within the limits of said city of Oswego, outside the Government piers, which now protect and form the harbor of said city."

The entire water front of the city (except the limited portion between the present piers) is thus given up to the exclusive ownership of a private corporation, and apparently for its exclusive use. The extent of shore thus transferred from the present owners to this corporation is said to be at least two miles.

The purpose and object for which the company is created is nowhere expressly defined, nor in exchange for the great privileges conferred on it, nor any duties to the public enjoined upon it. The bill speaks of a "harbor hereby authorized," but it nowhere imposes upon the company the duty of constructing an artificial harbor, nor, in fact, any other duty.

The company, under the bill, may do almost any thing; but it is not required to do any thing. It may take lands on shore and under water, fill up, build piers, docks, wharves, warehouses, lay railroad tracks, or make "such other improvements for commercial or manufacturing purposes as may be desired by the said company;" but it is not required to give the use or benefit of these piers, wharves, docks, slips or other improvements to the use of the public on any terms. Upon this point the bill is silent.

The authorities of the city of Oswego are given no power nor control over the changes proposed in its water front; except that, when the improvements of the company come to be connected with the present harbor of Oswego, the connection is to be made "in such manner as the directors of the company shall determine best calculated to promote their interests, subject, however, to the approval of the same by the authorities of the city of Oswego."

If the real purpose of the company be the improvement of the harbor of Oswego for public use, that is a matter in which the city authorities or some public agent should have a controlling voice. If the object of the company be simply its own private gain, then the proposed transfer of the lands along the shore and under water from their present owners, without such owners' consent, to this company, would, according to judicial decisions, be taking private property, and not for public uses.

The charter granted to the company is perpetual, and is not subject to modification, amendment and repeal by the Legislature.

The bill would create a corporation clothed with extraordinary powers, no corresponding obligations being imposed on it, and subject to no future control by the Legislature.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

A message from the Assembly was received and read, in the words following:

The undersigned, committee of conference on the part of the Senate and Assembly, upon the disagreement of the two Houses in relation to the Assembly amendment to Senate bill No. 286, being "An act to provide for the safe custody and care of insane criminals," beg leave to report: That they have considered the subject, and find that the Assembly amendment does not in any manner alter or impair the Senate bill; but simply provides for the repeal of a section of the Revised Statutes directing all sentences to expire between the 1st of April and the 1st of October each year. This provision has been rendered inoperative by subsequent legislation, except that most prisoners, who by meritorious conduct procure a reduction of their term of imprisonment, are now discharged in mid-winter contrary to the intention of the Legislature.

To prevent this result the section referred to should be repealed, and while it might more appropriately have been done by an independent act, yet we can see no evil to result from attaching the amendment to the bill in question, the only way in which the object could be accomplished at this late period of the session. We therefore recommend a concurrence on the part of the Senate in the Assembly amendment.

The President having announced the order of business to be messages from the Assembly,

Mr. Tweed moved that the Senate concur in the amendments of the Assembly to the bill entitled "An act to make provision for the government of the city of New York."

Mr. Folger raised the point of order, that the committee of conference on the part of the Senate, and the committee of conference on the part of the Assembly, having reported to the respective houses that the committees of conference could not agree upon the bill, or on any amendment thereto, and having so reported to the two houses respectively, and the two houses having respectively agreed with the report, and discharged the respective committees; and that still being the state of facts the bill is defeated for this session, and no further action is parliamentary.

The President stated that the committee having reported that they failed to agree, and the papers having been returned to the Senate, and the committee having been discharged, the matter was in the same stage of proceedings as before the committee was appointed, and therefore a motion to concur is in order.

2d. If the joint rule applies to such cases, the reason for the rule under the circumstances fails, and therefore decide the point of order not well taken.

Mr. Folger appealed from the decision of the Chair.
